Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Stone Chapel is one of the few Greek Revival places of worship in Baltimore County, a well designed and well crafted structure in a pleasing setting but its revivalism only extends to the portico. The temple-like porch originally had fluted columns, stucco coated over brick, but in 1979 the fluting was filled in during repairs. The portico has four columns, a frieze decorated with triglyphs, and a plain pediment. Four pilasters are set in the front wall.

Greek Revival motifs are not followed by the doors and windows, which are round-topped and their frames set in shallow, round-topped recesses. The main part of the chapel is four bays deep. A small extension at the back contained the original Sunday School rooms and is a miniature temple form, with its rear wall treated in Greek Revival style with a pediment and four pilasters. There is a plain center door flanked by two windows. The former meeting rooms were converted to a kitchen in 1954. The same 1954 expansion added a east wing that provides the present meeting rooms, resulting in an L-shaped layout. The newer wing has a basement and a large meeting room. The entire structure is gable-roofed and stuccoed on the outside, blending into the original building of 1862.

The interior of the church is entirely clear and open space from the front doors to the rear wall. There are no internal supports. The ceiling is flat, gradually curving from the inside walls. The four windows on each side of the aisle are of an amber colored opalescent glass which admit a soft glowing light. The panes date from the 1911 renovations; they contain no figures or symbols, but the glass has a mixture of tones. The pews are dark wood, richly carved and highly polished. The sanctuary is enclosed by rails with turned mahogany ballusters. The wall surfaces are plain, painted in solid tones of light brown. The gilded stars once painted on the ceiling were lost in one of the mid-20th century redecorations. An antique band of Victorian-era stenciling survives along the boundary between the walls and the curved surface that blends into the ceiling. The tall front doors are widely separated and heavily paneled on the outside surface, well polished on the inside. The two doors are formed of two leaves each and are remarkably tall. The weathering on the outside of the doors suggests that they are original. The hardware has an antique look. The large portable desk-pulpit used by Bishop Francis Asbury is kept in the large meeting room of the modern wing.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

Stone Chapel's congregation goes back to November 25, 1772, when Francis Asbury preached not far away at the now extinct Joshua Owings home, Harmony Hall, on Winands Road, giving the impetus to a Methodist group that became permanent. Asbury became the first Methodist bishop in this country and Joshua Owings' son Richard became the first native-born American to serve as a Methodist minister. Maryland has some of the earliest sites related to American Methodism, although some of the famous trees under which early circuit riders preached have been lost over the years. The first Stone Chapel has been replaced, although some of the material is probably in the present building.

In 1785 (May 30) the Methodist Society's trustees acquired one acre of land from Dr. William Lyon under a 99-year lease at a ground-rent of one peppercorn per annum. The tract name here is "Rich Level" and was described in the deed as located on the Great road leading from Baltimore Town to Conowago." (1) The chapel constructed by 1786 was probably fairly small; it was remembered as a rectangular stone structure with gable roof and green shutters. There was an overhead gallery for Black members.

The first trustees were George Steyer, Cornelius Howard, Stephen Shelmerdine, and Charles Carnan. Bishop Asbury visited the completed chapel on September 7, 1787, after preaching to an unresponsive audience in Reisterstown, recording in his diary, "Thence I rode to the new church where I had much more life." The Baltimore Conference met at Stone Chapel on May 1-2, 1800, with Bishop Asbury presiding.

A cemetery was laid out in 1858 on an adjoining parcel acquired from church member Dr. John Fisher of Alto Dale. (2) About that time, the original building was found to be in disrepair and the plans for a Greek Revival replacement were drawn by James Curley, who charged only $25 for this excellent design.. The new church was built in 1862 at a cost of $5,461.98. By December of 1864, the church debt had been reduced to $497.08. (3)

Dr. John F. Goucher, president of the Women's College of Baltimore (now renamed Goucher College in his memory) married Mary Cecelia Fisher of Alto Dale and came to reside at that next-door estate, served on the chapel board, and contributed heavily to the maintenance of the building.

In 1886 the congregation spent $1200 to alter the seats, paint both exterior and interior, and repair the steps and walk. A furnace was installed in 1889. To celebrate the 125th anniversary of forming the congregation, another round of repairs was initialed in 1911. The well-remembered stars were painted on the ceiling, and leaded glass windows were installed along with carpeting and electricity. (4)

A wing containing meeting space was constructed in 1954 and the original rear meeting rooms were converted into a fully equipped kitchen.

An historical pamphlet was printed in 1962 for the 100th anniversary of the present building. The cover illustration was a line drawing by Aaron Sopher. For that celebration the original pulpit-desk used by Bishop Asbury was refurbished; the wide wooden pulpit-and-cabinet combination was stored in a barn for many years before its rescue. (5)

Repairs undertaken in 1979 during the pastorate of the Rev. Edwin Schell, the famous church historian and archivist of the entire denomination, resulted in patching the stucco outer walls and patching the crumbled fluting on the columns; Mr. Schell noted that craftsmen could not be found to sculpt the fluting, so the columns emerged with smooth surfaces. (6)

In 1991, the staff of the Landmarks Preservation Commission conducted a videotape interview with Mrs. Josephine Grinnings (1904- ) of 1805 Reisterstown Road, a life-long church member and descendant of Joshua Owings and the Rev. Richard Owings. Mrs. Grinnings recalled counting the gilded stars overhead during services when she was a child. She recalled a Sunday School student who jumped over the sanctuary railing and fled when he couldn't remember what he was supposed to recite to the audience. Mrs. Grinnings recalled that the first electric system had exactly one overhead light bulb to illuminate this rather large interior.
